We want your ideas to help shape a new regional park in Clyde.

As part of the Victorian Government's Suburban Parks Program, three new parks are being established in Melbourne's growth areas. This includes a 120 hectare regional park in Clyde which will be created on Ballarto Road beside a new sports precinct.

Together the regional park, sports precinct, and adjacent drainage basin will create a large community space three times bigger than the Royal Botanic Gardens Melbourne and similar size to the entire Cranbourne Botanic Gardens including bushland area.

Access to nature and green space close to home is important for our health and wellbeing. Creating new parks in Melbourne's growth areas will make sure that the Clyde and surrounding communities can unlock the benefits of time in nature and experience wildness or sensory respite from urban surrounds.
